

Serving as the Executive Assistant of the National Black Nurses Association (NBNA), Tylasia McCullough provides high-level administrative assistance to the Executive Director, performs filing and record keeping, and maintains efficient communication between President and Board members. Given her comprehensive experience in administrative management and health care, McCullough brings to NBNA an extensive background in executive communications, customer service, and documentation.

Prior to joining NBNA, McCullough worked as an Executive Assistant at the Transit Employees Health and Welfare Fund. There she orchestrated communications for company executives, planned meeting logistics, and travel arrangements. Aside from administrative work, McCullough has experience in real estate as a Client Management Specialist. Her main responsibilities included client relations, designing advertisements, and marketing materials.

McCullough received her Bachelor of Science in Sociology from Bowie State University. Additionally, she maintained a place on Dean's list throughout her college career.
